Installation

• The CHICAGO Expansion Bolt is a complete anchor including bolt, nut and expansion unit. It comes all assembled, eliminating the need for buying the bolt separately. This is the most practical type of anchor, wherever it is possible to standardize on a few sizes.

ORIGINAL: (Catalog Series Type 1100) The Original CHICAGO Expansion Bolt consists of a taper-headed bolt, lead sleeve, metal cone and nut completely assembled. When installed, the taper-head of the bolt and the metal cone expand the lead sleeve to fill all the pores and crevices of the material in which it is set.

LIFETIME: (Catalog Series Type 2100) They call this the "Expansion Bolt that won't pull out." Its superiority over other anchors comes from its steel cone which expands over the head of the bolt when set. This, plus an extra long lead sleeve, assures maximum holding power — far beyond normal requirements — up to the tensile strength of the bolt. It is one anchor that won't pull out. It is especially effective in over-size holes. Vibration cannot loosen the Lifetime and it will not damage the face of masonry.

SUPREME: (Catalog Series Type 5100) Same design as Lifetime except for the packaging method. To save time and speed installation, CHICAGO SUPREME Expansion Bolts are packed in this container which holds the assembled bolts in upright position convenient to pick up and drop in the hole. The nuts are packed in a separate box at one end of the container for ready use.
